

Albert Mensah, One of the World's Leading Motivational Speakers and "The Prince of Possibilities" Reveals...

Monday - September 13, 2010

Dear Friend:

Here's an interesting question to ask yourself right now... Have you ever noticed that when it comes time to discover your own opportunities, sometimes all it takes is a matter of attitude?

It's a simple but very true fact of life.

Take my personal story, for instance. As a youngster growing up in the impoverished nation of Ghana, Africa, I had the privilege of seeing my first American movie at the age of eight.

It was something that changed my entire life.

The vivid images of American citizens looking so happy and content was something that I just had to experience for myself. I knew right then and there that I needed to become a part of such an incredible country.

My goal became immediately clear: I wanted to live and prosper in the United States of America!

For the next few years, I spent most of my time in the library, learning everything I could about the United States and corresponding with American pen pals. Because of my fascination with the U.S., it wasn't long before my friends and family began calling me "States," a nickname I took great pride in.

Growing up, I knew my path to success lay in attending an accredited US college. So I focused and worked hard throughout high school in order to achieve my goal. After graduating, I was fortunate enough to receive a four-year scholarship to Western Maryland College, where I was an All-American soccer player.

I worked hard in sales for several years and was presented with a number of opportunities to speak publicly about my lifelong journey to the United States. Within a short while, my speaking opportunities blossomed into a rewarding full-time career. I found myself truly blessed.

Now for the past 12 years, I've been consulting, training, speaking, and writing about employee development and organizational change.

I've developed an impressive client list that boasts businesses such as Starbucks, Boeing, Merrill Lynch, Nordstrom, Bank of America, John Deere, Wells Fargo Bank, and Costco, as well as dozens of Student Councils, Professional Associations, and Educational Groups (just to name a few).

In fact, during my professional career, I've probably made thousands of public speeches to audiences as diverse as small public schools, Fortune 500 companies, and mid-sized businesses located all around the world.

in 1999, I was even fortunate enough to be recognized as first runner-up at the prestigious Toastmasters International World Championship of Public Speaking.

Not bad for a kid from Africa!

...Life-Changing Secrets to Transforming Your Life!

Through the years, I've discovered that one of the greatest lessons we can learn as people is that our potential is unlimited. Unfortunately, for many of us, this lesson is lost or forgotten once we reach adulthood.

We get bogged down with our own "daily grind" and forget how to recognize real opportunities for change. We fall into our passive routines and become unmotivated creatures of habit.

The fact is, in order to truly become successful, we need to take the time to invest in our own personal growth. Unfortunately, very few of us take the necessary care to establish a practical, actionable plan designed to achieve real success - one that truly addresses our unique goals.

It's no secret that dreams are never built on low expectations. To aim high is to dream of a result that seems to exceed possibility.

The truth is that most of us simply fail to fulfill our dreams because we restrict what we believe is possible.

One important component of success is remembering that belief creates vision, and vision BECOMES reality. Any dream or goal we conceive becomes a reality because there is a way to achieve it.

It's a simple yet very powerful truth about life...
